HOW THESE CAMPAIGNS WORK TOGETHER IN COMBINATION

	Performance Max	Audience Campaigns	Search Campaigns	Shopping Campaigns	Why would an advertiser want this combination of campaigns with PMax?	Do these all complement each other?	How much incremental volume may PMax drive? (High, medium, low)	Recommendations and considerations for this campaign combination (In addition to general PMax best practices)
PMax only	✓	✗	✗	✗	- Small advertiser that just wants an automated one-size-fits-all solution - Advertiser looking to test a new business line with PMax in a separate account		n/a	n/a
PMax + Search	✓	✗	✓	✗	- Advertiser with a clear set of exact match keywords they want to control - Use PMax to get additional volume on network while staying within a target/goal	Yes Exact match keywords are prioritized over PMax	If advertiser only has exact match keywords – High If advertiser already has other products such as broad match, DSAs, and/or MMAs – Medium	Budgets: Give PMax campaign up to 2–3x the budget of your historical standalone campaigns, due to PMax serving across multiple ad formats and inventory	PMax vs. Non-exact Match Products: If advertiser wants to continue using other campaigns for more control, focus non-exact match products (e.g., DSA) on specific targets or objectives that are different from the PMax campaign	Focus on PMax budgets and general PMax best practices
PMax + Audience + Search	✓	✓	✓	✗	- Advertiser wants to generate new interest with an audience not already considering them via audience campaigns - Use PMax and search to catch conversions brought in from audience campaigns - Tailor messaging to specific audiences, with a more customized strategy - Leverage video assets in audience campaigns (coming to PMax in the future)	Yes Exact match keywords are prioritized over PMax	Medium (depending on other campaigns)	If PMax campaign is not performing as expected, check if you're budget constrained	If separating out other campaigns to control for different targets or objectives, the more the advertiser can categorize their different products, URLs, and goals, the more helpful for overall performance.	Targeting For Audience Campaigns: Use specific audience targeting to customize strategy and impression-based remarketing to connect the dots
PMax + Search + Shopping	✓	✗	✓	✓	- Advertiser with a clear set of exact match keywords they want to control, + separate shopping campaigns for more control - Use PMax to get additional volume on network while staying within a target/goal	Yes Exact match over PMax PMax over shopping	High to Medium (depending on other campaigns)			Shopping: PMax can be used for all shopping needs, unless a separate campaign is desired for more control
PMax + Audience + Search + Shopping	✓	✓	✓	✓	- Advertiser wants to take advantage of all the PMax + Audience + Search capabilities above - Separate shopping campaign for more control	Yes Exact over PMax/PMax over shopping	Medium (depending on other campaigns)			In case your PMax campaign becomes budget-capped, shopping campaigns can be used as a “catch-all” under PMax

HOW DIFFERENT CAMPAIGNS INTERACT WITH EACH OTHER

When a query matches exactly to an exact, phrase, or broad match keyword within a search campaign, Search campaigns are prioritized over Performance Max campaigns. On the other hand, Performance Max campaigns are prioritized over standard shopping campaigns.

In all other cases, (e.g., an audience campaign), there is no hard prioritization, and the best ranked ad enters the auction (therefore does not impact CPCs).

Campaign #1	Campaign #2	Result
Performance Max campaign	Standard search campaign – Exact match keywords	Exact match is prioritized over Performance Max
Performance Max campaign	Standard search campaign – Non-exact match (broad, phrase, etc.)	With queries that exactly match a broad or phrase keyword, search campaigns will be prioritized. Otherwise, ad with best rank is chosen for auction (no impact to CPCs)
Performance Max campaign	Audience campaign	Ad with best rank is chosen for auction (no impact to CPCs)
Performance Max campaign	Standard shopping campaign	Performance Max campaigns are prioritized

CONSIDERATIONS FOR PMAx

Even with Performance Max included as part of your strategy, you can have a more advanced setup with controls.

Shopping:

- PMax can be used for all shopping needs, unless a separate campaign is desired for more control (e.g. brand vs. non-brand)
- In case your PMax campaign becomes budget-capped, shopping campaigns can also be used as a “catch-all” under PMax

PMax vs. Non-exact Match Products:

- If client wants to continue using other campaigns for more control, focus non-exact match products
- (e.g., DSA or shopping) on specific targets or objectives that are different from the PMax campaign

If separating out other campaigns to control for different targets or objectives, the more your client can categorize their different products, URLs, and goals, the more helpful for overall performance
