AI-ASSISTED SHOPPING

Consumer behavior looks different than ever before.

They DISCOVER differently

ChatGPT shoppers often start with a personal problem, need, or passion rather than starting by searching a specific product.

They DESCRIBE their needs

Keyword searches are a thing of the past. In ChatGPT, consumers describe their problems and needs with full context to encourage precision in the recommendation they get back.

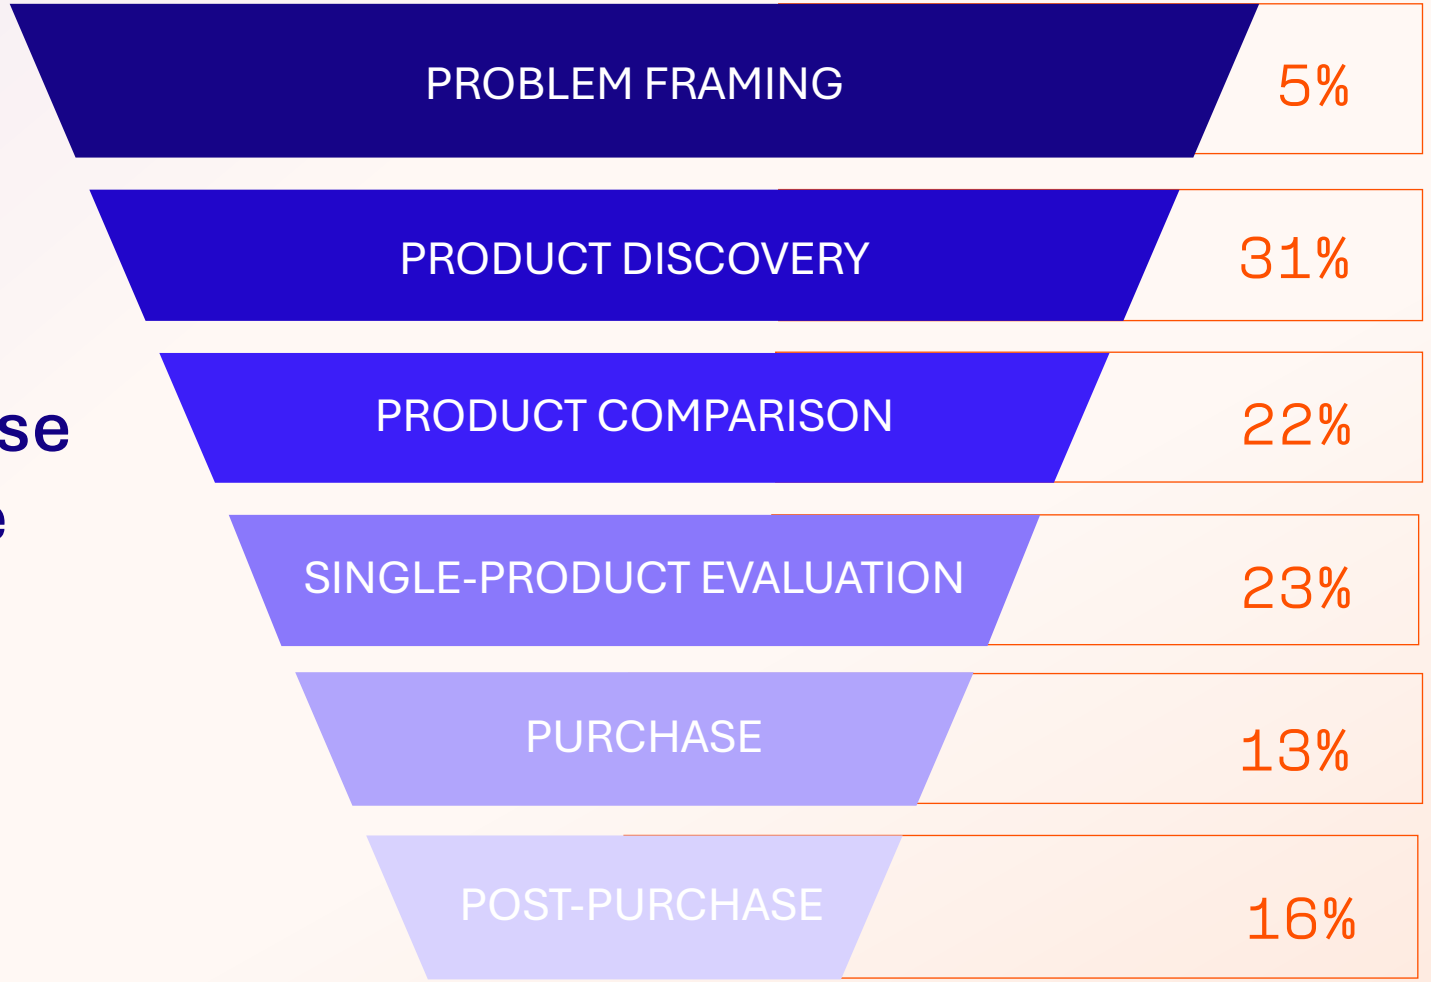

They TRUST AI-based consultation

Consumers trust that ChatGPT uses the personal detail and conversational iteration to propose the very best solution to them. Once the see the recommendation, they move faster.

OpenAI supply added to Criteo Campaign

- Existing Criteo integration is already OpenAI-ready
- Light onboarding options and customization available
- Can be activated as OpenAI only or hybrid campaign

Criteo sends campaign & product data

- Campaign settings and product metadata sent to OpenAI
- Up to 50,000 products can be included per campaign

3.

User enters a shopping query in ChatGPT

- User submits a natural language query in ChatGPT free or ChatGPT Go versions
- For queries relevant to shopping, an ad selection process begins

OpenAI uses query terms to select product

- OpenAI uses prompt language, memory, and their global knowledge of shopping discourse to determine the right products to surface.
- Once live, paid OAI ads are optimized based on clicks.

5.

Ad is returned alongside organic results

- Product details including an image and descriptive text appear separately from organic results
- The merchant URL is embedded into the ad, and users click out of OpenAI's environment to buy

6.

Campaign measurement returned

- Impressions and clicks are returned to Criteo and shared with the advertiser
- Measurement capabilities are expected to evolve as the test progresses

Advertiser Guidance for Allowing OpenAI Web Crawlers

Learn how to make your ad landing pages accessible to OpenAI and troubleshoot common access issues.

Updated: 2 days ago

Why does OpenAI use web crawlers?

We use crawlers to validate the safety of web pages submitted as ads on ChatGPT. When you submit an ad, OpenAI may visit the landing page to ensure it complies with our policies. We may also use content from the landing page to determine when it's most relevant to show the ad to users.

Which OpenAI crawlers should you allow?

You must allow OAI-AdsBot. We recommend allowing both OAI-AdsBot and OAI-SearchBot.

OpenAI crawlers fail to crawl my website. What should I do?

Most websites have multiple layers of protection before a crawler can successfully access a webpage. Work with your engineering or security team to validate that OpenAI crawlers can pass through each of the following layers.

1. robots.txt

Why does OpenAI use web crawlers?
Which OpenAI crawlers should you allow?

2. Web protection and bot mitigation
3. Human verification and anti-bot logic

Crawler and landing page FAQ
Which crawler is required for ads review?
Can support manually bypass crawler validation?
What should my engineering team check first?
Are app-store links, deep links, or non-web destinations supported as landing pages?
When should I re-upload or request review again?

WHAT IS A CRAWLER?

- OpenAI's crawler scans product feeds to identify and qualify products for ads
- We should consider this an input to relevance logic and product eligibility for ChatGPT Ads

WHY DOES IT MATTER?

- If your site settings blocks OpenAI's crawler from reviewing PDP pages, product delivery can be limited

HOW TO RESOLVE CRAWLER BLOCKS

- You the advertiser must make a change to their site settings with robots.txt (Criteo cannot make this change on their behalf)

CRITEO MODELED CONVERSIONS FOR CHATGPT

OpenAI Users are on Safari and iOS

The majority of ChatGPT usage happens on iOS and Safari where cookies and IDs are limited. That makes ChatGPT one of the most identity-challenged channels in advertising.

New Channels Create New Blind Spots

Without modeling, only about 20-40% of actual post-click OpenAI sales surface in deterministic attribution, leaving marketers blinded when it comes to evaluating performance and value.

Conversion Modeling Helps Recover Missing Signal

Criteo estimates the missing conversions using deterministic sales observed in well-measured environments like Android, giving you a more complete view of performance.

PROPRIETARY & CONFIDENTIAL. COPYRIGHT © CRITEO 2026. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

CRITEO × OpenAI

HOW IT WORKS

1. Observe the Golden Slice
   Criteo identifies a golden slice of well-measured environments like Android and Chrome to serve as the baseline for true OpenAI sales.

2. Estimate Missed Sales
   The golden slice baseline rates are used to estimate conversions in identity-challenged environments like Safari and iOS.

3. Build Total Conversions
   Observed and modeled conversions are blended into one number, with strict caps in place to limit the representation of modeled sales.

4. Recalibrate
   Models are updated daily to reflect the most accurate view of ChatGPT sales across Android and iOS systems.

How does Criteo ensure modeled conversions are accurate?

All conversions are grounded in your real clicks, landings, and reliably measured sales in well-measured environments like Android or Chrome where identity is at parity Android and Chrome where deterministic signals are available.

Why might my GA4 or MMP numbers look different?

Identity challenges impact all partners who measure ChatGPT ads, and each measurement platform relies on different signals, attribution logic, and levels of visibility. Some discrepancies are normal and expected and can be influenced by data availability, integration to OpenAI, and methodologies.

Are observed conversions included in modeled conversions?

Yes. The deterministic conversions we see from measured environments are the basis for all modeled conversions, available for post-click only with 1, 7, and 30 day lookbacks.

Is my data used to calculate my own modeled conversions?

Yes. Criteo uses your specific sales trends to calibrate modeled conversions so that the sales you see are calibrated to your campaign's observed sales patterns.

WHEN TO USE IT:
Understanding product resonance with ChatGPT users, building deeper insight into which types of products are being matched to prompts. This is a good substitute for prompt-level insights.

KEY VALUE:
Shows which products from the catalog are actually being surfaced and clicked in ChatGPT.
Impression: how often did a product match to a prompt
Click: how often did a user engage with the product that was displayed in ChatGPT

WHAT TO SAY:
“This report reveals which products are earning visibility and engagement in ChatGPT, so we can identify which assortments, categories, or hero SKUs are best suited for this environment and use that learning to guide future strategy.”

WHEN TO USE IT:
Build understanding of the messages that are resonating with ChatGPT users. Always use this when PromptSmart Ads are deployed (not exclusive to PromptSmart)

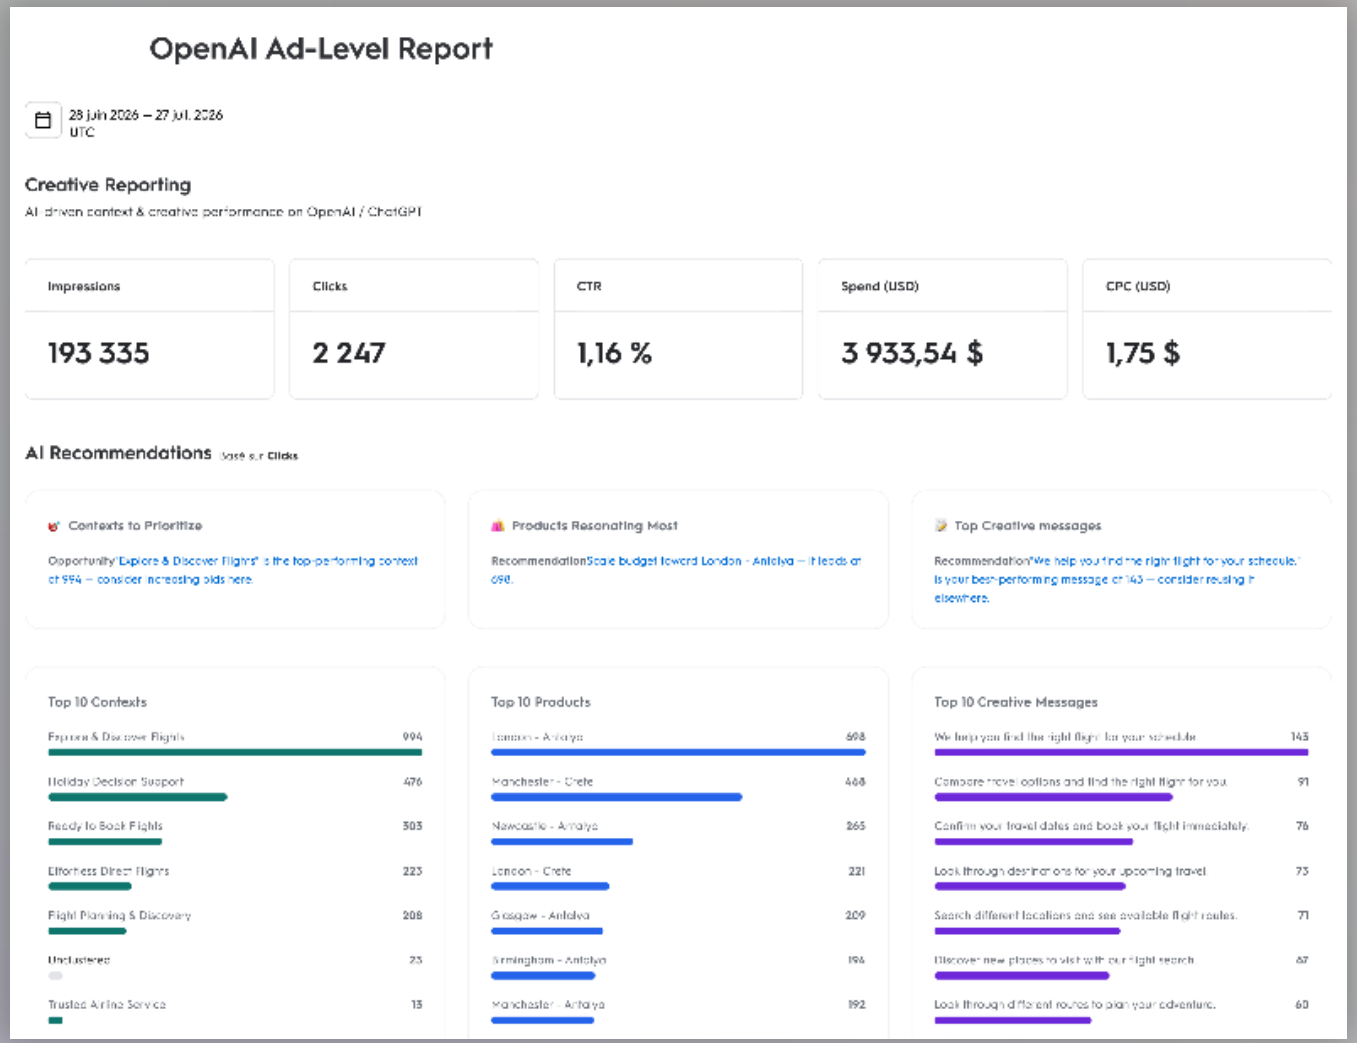

KEY VALUE:
Shows which products, messages, and contextual themes are getting engagement in ChatGPT. This is the best way for marketers to unpack consumer mindset and learn what messaging works. Brands can use this insight to improve ad creatives, but also borrow these insights to improve organic content for GEO discoverability.

WHAT TO SAY:
“This report helps us turn OpenAI into an optimization story for both paid and organic marketing by showing which messages, creative themes, and product narratives are actually winning attention.”

Path-to-Purchase

WHEN TO USE IT:
Tell a story about cross-channel value and full-funnel marketing. Use blinded reports to pitch new customers, or build insight in mid or post campaign reporting.
Combat "no ROAS means no value"

KEY VALUE:
Shows where OpenAI appears in the conversion journey and whether it introduces, assists, or helps close demand.

WHAT TO SAY:
"This report helps us prove that OpenAI is creating value across the customer journey, not just at the last click. It shows whether OpenAI is opening new demand, strengthening consideration, or helping close conversion so the client can see the channel's full commercial impact."
