Overview of the B2C landscape

A positive outlook for home services creates opportunity

Third-party data highlights growth and a healthy global outlook for home services and provides us aggressive benchmarks for review.

The US home services market was valued at $370.86 billion in 2021 and forecasted to grow at a 19% compound annual growth rate (CAGR) till 2030.

There has been a 32% increase in new home service businesses YoY since 2023, surpassing new business growth in every other category.

The global market for home services reached a remarkable $1.2 billion in 2023, validating current industry forecasts.

Microsoft B2C advertising growth signals strong consumer demand

- 12% CAGR since 2023 for Business to Consumer (B2C) spend - the best single measure of long-term growth.
- At nearly ~2X spend growth, clicks are key callout, and a healthy indicator for increased customer supply.
- Microsoft B2C Advertisers are achieving more results per dollar with scalable segment growth.

Source: Microsoft Internal | US | Channel Partner & SMB | Oct 2023 – Dec 2025 | B2C Performance Growth

- Click-through rates (CTR) outperformed all other metrics, driving higher traffic at lower costs and resulting in strong overall efficiency.
- Higher CTR = stronger alignment and better audience targeting. April–June (Q2) has the best engagement for top B2C verticals.
- Cost-per-clicks (CPC) seasonally fluctuate. Since CTRs have surged, use this as an opportunity to connect with high-intent audiences.

Top converting paths by user search query types:

Overall share of searches

Bidded keywords capture early-journey intent while non-bidded queries dominate later stages

Capturing demand across the full journey requires strategies that adapt as search behavior changes.

Use broad match, audience signals, and discovery-oriented keyword strategies to capture emerging, non-bidded queries later in the journey.

Microsoft Internal Data Oct-Dec 2025, US Only

Advertisers optimized only to bidded keywords risk missing high-intent demand later in the journey.

Intent evolution naturally introduces new phrasing, project-specific, and provider-level queries.

Maximize Conversions by Aligning Ad Formats to the Consumer Journey

First Ad exposure

Prioritize Audience Ads for low-friction awareness, then pair with Responsive Search Ads (RSAs) (with broad/phrase coverage) to capture the first wave of intent once users start exploring.

Middle touchpoints

As users refine needs, expand coverage with Broad Match and Performance Max to capture evolving, category-level, and long-tail searches not explicitly bid on.

Last touchpoint

When intent peaks, Text Ads do the heavy lifting on last-touch conversions—tighten toward high-intent terms, add extensions (location/call), and use Smart Bidding to prioritize conversion-ready traffic at the bottom of the journey.

Using Performance Max and Audience ads together

Is there a risk of cannibalization between PMax and Audience ads?

- No CPC impact: Even if both campaigns target the same domain, they don't compete or drive up costs. This holds true across accounts.
- Audience overlap: If campaigns share identical goals, they may pursue the same users. However, this does not affect CPCs or overall cost.

How should I think about using PMax and Audience ads together?

- Audience ads are better suited to advertisers who want a more targeted campaign and have goals at other points of the funnel, not just conversion focused. PMax campaigns provide broader, less targeted reach and focus more on bottom-funnel users who are ready to convert.
- When using both campaigns together you should:
 - ✓ Tailor messaging
 - ✓ Keep PMax always-on
 - ✓ Leverage creative insights
 - ✓ Set appropriate CPA/ROAS goals

Top tip!

Set up an 'always on' Audience ads campaign with small (even $5-10) daily budget that fuels your impression-based remarketing list.

Use this impression-based remarketing list as an audience signal on your PMax campaign to help speed up learning time and connect the dots across campaign types.

Top takeaways

If you remember just a few things from today's session, make it these:

Top takeaways

1. PMax continues to provide differentiated value for customers with our unique network/focus on lower-funnel, unique entities like MMA and the tone tool in Copilot, and unique signals in LinkedIn and Impression-based remarketing. We've also made import a bit easier, but you may find it better/faster to build from scratch.
2. Structure PMax around meaningful business dimensions (products, brands, audiences) while staying consolidated to let AI optimize—paired with compelling, lifestyle-driven creative that reflects real ad experiences.
3. Impression-based remarketing can open new opportunities doors for PMax success and testing Audience ads as a whole, especially for non-UET customers. Try setting up a small 'always-on' Audience ad campaign to fuel your impression-based remarketing list and add it as a signal to your PMax campaign to help connect the dots.
4. New customer acquisition (NCA) helps drive additional value while maintaining scale. If you bid up within your current campaign, ensure you have a differentiated conversion value set for new customers (you don't need the conversion value when exclusively targeting). Also, refresh audience lists as often as possible!
